Charles W. Householder Found
I love it when new finds come out of the blue. Bruce Allardice is not a member of our committee, but when he saw the article about the two Charles Householders in the Baseball Research Journal, he put his genealogy skills to work. He discovered that the Philadelphia Householder died in September of 1913. We know he is the ballplayer, because his family and occupation match the family and occupation we know the ballplayer to have. Research by Richard Malatzky confirms this. Bruce wins the Find of the Month award.

East Was Not West
Harry East played one game for Baltimore in 1882. He later became a doctor in St. Louis. We had notes that he was supposedly living in California in the 1930s, but could find no listing for him in California. Small wonder, since he died in 1905. Peter Morris checked the Directory of Deceased American Physicians and found that East committed suicide in 1905. He is buried in Xenia, Illinois. Now if we can just find a Directory of Deceased American Bartenders.

Edward Flynn
Although no find seems simple, this one was pretty easy. Peter Morris went to Springfield, Illinois and looked for a death certificate of Edward J. Flynn. We knew his birth date and his address. We also knew that he was a dentist. Peter found a death certificate that matched perfectly. He died August 28, 1929 in Chicago.

Harry Jacoby
Richard Matatzky pursued Harry Jacoby through the Philadelphia city directories. He was listed as a ballplayer and the directory also had Jacoby's family listed. Richard found Jacoby's death in 1900 and the family matched that of the ballplayer. There are still a lot of ballplayers missing in the Philadelphia area.

Gid Gardner
The Hall of Fame sent me a copy of a letter from a relative of Franklin Washington Gardner. His relative shared the exact birth date and place of the player we listed, June 9, 1859 in Attleboro, Massachusetts. However, he died in 1945 and our player died in 1914. Dick Thompson consulted Tom Shea's notes and our death date on Gardner is correct. However, our birth date matches up with the wrong Frank Gardner, so I eliminated the birth date we have.

Last Month's Mystery
We were missing a place of death for James Brenneman, who died in 1994. Al Quimby wrote the newspaper of the players hometown and received notice that he died in Pearl, Mississippi. Al was then able to find an obituary and confirm the place of death.

New Members
Please welcome Scott Allen to the biographical committee. Scott's address is 633 Lillian St. Collinsville, IL 62234. His e-mail address is strike3@apci.net and his code number will be A5.

Sad News
Ed Koller, a long-time member of this committee died on May 22, 5 days before his 89th birthday. I never met Ed. but corresponded with him several times. He will be missed.
Birthday List
Somehow, I left the birthday out of last month’s newsletter. I won’t make that same mistake again. He is the list of all nonageriarians celebrating birthdays in July and August. Be sure to send a card.
