INTRODUCTION

OBJECTIVE

The purpose of this study is two-fold. One is to develop a numerical indicator of the level of public confidence in the peace process using a set of standardized questions, which remain unchanged with each wave. The other is to use a set of questions related to recent social, economic and political developments in order to gauge public opinion on the situation of peace and conflict, which by definition will change from one wave to another.

Such information, collected over a period of time, will provide civil society and policy makers a useful barometer of the Sri Lankan public’s opinions, and ensure that such collective opinions are given due importance and incorporated into the policy debate.

SCOPE & METHODOLOGY

The survey is carried out using a structured questionnaire administered through face-to-face interviews amongst a randomly selected sample of 1600. This survey was conducted in 20 administrative districts, excluding the North due to the security situation prevailing in that region. Data is weighted to reflect the actual ethnographic composition of the districts in which the sample was surveyed.

This is the twenty seventh wave of the PCI study, which was first conducted in May 2001. This publication presents only the top-line results of the November 2007 survey.

The results of these twenty seven waves offer us data for a comparative study on changing public opinion regarding key issues, ranging from perceptions on war and peace to current political developments. The results are subject to a 3% margin of error.

 This particular wave of the PCI used a snowball sampling technique to select the sample in the Eastern province and the Tamil community that participated in the survey were selected using the same sampling technique. The Tamil community were chosen from the Eastern districts of Ampara, Batticaloa and Trincomalee as well as from the city of Colombo.

The following are the significant trends observed in the PCI November 2007 survey. It is important to note that this particular wave of the PCI only covers the Sinhala, Muslim and Up-Country Tamil and Tamil communities in the areas outside the North. The Eastern province was surveyed using a snowball sampling technique, and the entire Tamil sample was surveyed using this same method. The Tamil sample was chosen from the Eastern districts of Ampara, Trincomalee and Batticaloa as well as from the city of Colombo.

- Important Issues: When asked to rank five national issues according to their order of importance, the Sinhala (35.1%), Up Country (34.6%) and Muslim (35.5%) give high priority to the economy. While 24.6% of the Tamil community chose the economy as a very important issue the majority in that community (27.7%) gave their highest priority to the peace process. 23.1% of the Sinhala community also give precedence to the war against terrorism. (page 15)

- Solutions: A majority of the Sinhala community (48.5%) feel that the war can be ended and peace restored in Sri Lanka only by the government defeating the LTTE. In the other three communities, (Tamil- 62.3%, Up Country Tamil- 96.7%, Muslim- 85.2%) the option chosen was to stop the war and conduct peace negotiations. However, when asked if they feel that a political settlement is essential to end the conflict, majorities in all four groups (Sinhala-35.6%, Tamil- 67.1%, Up Country Tamil- 40.3%, Muslim- 71.0%) state that a political settlement is essential. (pages 16 and 17)

- Commitment to peace talks: A majority in the Sinhala (62.2%) and Muslim (42.1%) Communities agree that the government is committed to find peace through talks. As for the Up Country Tamil community, 49.7% disagree with this while 31.8% say that they do not know or are not sure. A significant 67.9% of the Tamil community does not feel that the government is committed to peace talks. (page 18) With regards to the LTTE’s commitment to finding peace through talks, majorities in the Sinhala (77.5%), Muslim (42.7%) and Tamil (47.3%) disagree that this is the case. The response from the Up Country Tamil community is mixed: 28.7% feel that the LTTE does have this commitment, while 34.0% disagree and 37.3% do not know or are not sure of the LTTE’s position. (page 19)

- An end to the conflict: A majority of the Sinhala community (42.6%) feel that the country is somewhat close to approaching a permanent settlement to the ethnic conflict. The same question, when posed to the other three communities elicited a different response. A majority of persons in all three minority communities (Tamil -63.9%, Up Country Tamil- 65.8% and Muslim – 49.6%) feel that the country is not close at all to reaching any kind of permanent settlement. 21.5% of the Up Country Tamil community and 23.6% of the of the Muslim community feel that the situation regarding the conflict has remained the same. (page 20)

- Peace Negotiations: When asked who should be involved in peace negotiations, the response received was varied. In the Sinhala community, the majority (26.8%) felt that only the Government and the LTTE should be involved in peace talks, as did a majority of the Up Country Tamil community, 44.3%. The Tamil community (35.9%) supported the idea that peace talks should involve the Government, LTTE and an international third party, although 23.1% of this same group opted for negotiations between the Government, Opposition, LTTE, Tamil and Muslim parties and an international third party. This latter option was most favoured by 59.8% of the Muslim community. (page 20)
International Involvement

- A majority of persons in the Sinhala (62.1%) and Muslim (42.7%) communities approve of international assistance to the Government in its war against the LTTE, while 73.2% of the Tamil community and 49.4% of the Up Country Tamils disapprove. The communities were also asked which countries should provide this assistance. While most of the Sinhala and Muslim community could give no answer, 50% of the Tamils chose European countries and 66.7% of the Up Country Tamils chose Asian countries. (page 21)

- All four communities* (Sinhala- 51.1%, Tamil- 61.0%, Up Country Tamil- 46.9%, Muslim- 59.1%), however, are in agreement that there should be international assistance in the form of facilitation of future peace negotiations. Disapproval for the same is given by 27.7% of the Sinhala community and 24.4% of the Tamil community. Majorities in all four communities were unable to give a response regarding which country would be best suited to donate this aid. However, 30% of the Tamil community chose European nations while 28.4% of the Up Country Tamils chose Asian nations. (page 22)

- When asked for their approval for international assistance for the government’s development projects, all four groups agree that such aid is needed and necessary. Given that the goal of the Peace Confidence Index (PCI) study is to measure the fluctuations in public confidence levels towards the peace process over time it is essential that the study be conducted repetitively with equal pauses during the study. Hence, from May 2001 to February 2004, PCI was conducted bi-monthly, however, from March 2005 onwards, SI decided to conduct the study quarterly to make the PCI more efficient.

The study is conducted using a structured questionnaire that is administered to a sample of approximately 1600 respondents during each phase of the study. This sample is adequate to capture the minimum ethnic diversity within the span of ten days of fieldwork. Although it is undeniable that an individual’s opinion on the peace process is influenced by a number of factors, the ethnic factor, which is the most important and influential, is the sole factor that has been accommodated in this model.

The total sample is distributed amongst 20 administrative districts (strata) of Sri Lanka, excluding the Northern Province due to the escalation of violence in the months prior to the survey. The sample size assigned to each stratum is approximately equal to the population proportions. However, some districts are over sampled due to the ethnic heterogeneity but the over sampling biases are eliminated by weighting the sample. In this particular wave, the Eastern province was surveyed using a snowball sampling technique, and the entire Tamil sample was surveyed using this same method. The Tamil sample was chosen from the Eastern districts of Ampara, Trincomalee and Batticaloa as well as from the city of Colombo.

A sample is allocated to a particular ethnicity within a district only if the population proportion of that particular ethnicity exceeds 9%. A Divisional Secretariat (DS) is selected as the primary sampling unit using the Simple Random Sampling technique while the Grama Niladharis Divisions (GND) in a DS are selected randomly as the secondary sampling unit using the ‘Grama Niladharis Divisions of Sri Lanka 1996’ published by the Department of Census and Statistics as the sample frame.

To maintain the quality of the fieldwork and ensure a maximum dispersion of the sample within a DS, enumerators are allowed to conduct a maximum of ten interviews a day in a GND. Within a given GND, the enumerator is advised to select a starting point randomly and proceed with interviews using the random walk (right hand rule) technique in order to assure the random selection of households. In the case of urban areas, the interviewer is instructed to skip a house while selecting the households, thus resulting in the interview-taking place at every alternative household. As the final sampling unit, the respondent is chosen from the household using the ‘KISH’ grid thus ensuring that each member of the household has an equal chance of being selected to the PCI sample.

The PCI national level estimates are subject to a 3% error margin with a .95 confidence level. It is noteworthy to mention here that the PCI model does not support the regional level analysis at the same level of precision.
Social indicator (SI) is an independent social research organisation, which conducts polls on socio-economic and political issues. Operating under the Board of Directors of the Center for Policy Alternatives (CPA), SI was established in September 1999, and filled a longstanding vacuum for permanent, professional and independent polling facility in Sri Lanka on social and political issues.

Polling is an instrument of the empowerment, a means by which the silent majority of the public can express their opinions on issues affecting them.

Our mission is to conduct surveys on key social issues, thereby providing a means through which public opinion can influence the public policy debate.
